2009 Royal Doulton Santa Figure

This year's annual Santa figure depicts the classic theme of two children "waiting for Santa." Santa has raised his finger to his lips to keep a young boy from waking his little sister.

This Santa figure is full of all the details that will be cherished by all – from the decorated Christmas tree to the snowy winter scene outside the window – this year's figure will add joy to the holiday season and bring years of treasured memories!

The 12 Days of Christmas Petite Collection by Royal Doulton

"The Twelve Days of Christmas" is an English Christmas carol first performed in 1842, though it was used in European traditions as early as the 16th century.

Each of these hand painted petite figures depicts a caroler in her best holiday attire holding a songbook as she sings her part in the classic song. The remaining six figures will be released in 2010.

Royal Doulton's Soldiers of the Revolution

The magnificently detailed collection of thirteen military sculptures that make up the Soldiers of the Revolution series was produced to celebrate the bicentenary of the United States. Made in limited editions of 350 of each figure and available only in North America, this series was designed in close association with the Colonial Williamsburg Foundation.

Six years of research ensured that each figure is historically correct down to the smallest details. The thirteen soldiers, which represent the regiments of the original thirteen states, have justly been described as, 'a masterpiece of historical accuracy sculpted in porcelain.'

We have the complete Soldiers of the Revolution series in stock. Call your Royal Doulton specialist to reserve your pieces today.

Royal Doulton Bone China Character Jugs

For a brief period, between 1968 and 1973, characters jugs were made in English Translucent China, a porcelain body pioneered by Doulton chemists in 1959. All the jugs had to be remodeled for this process, so the details vary between the earthenware and the translucent china jugs. The most noticeable variation is the size: the translucent china jugs fire about a half inch smaller than the earthenware variations. Today, these china jugs are sought after by collectors around the world. Seaway China has recently acquired a selection of these rare jugs in both large and small sizes.

World War II Nostalgia Series

World War II was known as "The People's War." After all, in 1940 Winston Churchill announced that: "This is a war of the unknown warriors." Royal Doulton has paid tribute to those unsung heroes and heroines of the time with this limited edition range of small-sized character jugs. Each jug symbolizes all that was best in England's Finest Hour.

Christmas Bunnykins

Bunnykins figures are collected and cherished by young and old all over the world. An English convent nun, Sister Mary Barbara, first created the Bunnykins family in 1934. Over the years, the talented Royal Doulton artists have contributed to the success of the range by adding whimsical and endearing figures, including these charming holiday inspired figures.

Each piece has been skillfully handmade and makes the perfect holiday gift!

You'll be charmed by these one-of-a-kind pieces of Bunnykins jewelry

Tracy Neether of Snoqualmie, Washington is a self-taught, award-winning artist whose jewelry designs have been commissioned for the Seattle Art Museum. Each of her one-of-a-kind designs have been handcrafted from broken pieces of antique china plates and wrapped in lead-free silver alloy bezels, which are coated with a protective finish to deter tarnishing. Her pieces are also finished with Swarovski crystal accents and fresh water pearls. Each of these "shards" of history are reminiscent of days gone by and will be enjoyed for years to come.

Jewelry designer Tracy Neether working on her vintage Bunnykins china jewelry.

Tracy writes, "My love of vintage English china goes back to my childhood visits to my Nana in Gloucester, England. Her home was full of beautiful antiques and a multitude of English chinaware. The charm of vintage china goes without saying. I often wonder the journey these pieces have had, the people and places they've seen. I design jewelry from vintage china plates, silverware, ephemera and old buttons to name just a few. I am living my dream and never dreamt I would be using broken china to create one-of-a-kind pieces of jewelry."

We are pleased to bring you Tracy's line of Bunnykins jewelry. Place your order today and wear something that shows your love of Bunnykins to the world! Each piece comes complete with a gift box and a burgundy organza bag.

New Bunnykins Family

To celebrate the 75th anniversary of Bunnykins, Royal Doulton has looked to its colorful past to create a new range of figures. This year's designs are styled after the very first Bunnykins family, which were first produced in 1939 by Royal Doulton Art Director, Charles Noke.
